3. Miguel Crespo - Head of Participation and Coaching, ITF

Miguel is the Head of Participation and Coaching at the Tennis Integrity and Development Department at the International Tennis Federation. He creates programmes, conducts courses, writes resources, organises conferences and coordinates research applied to tennis participation and coaching. A former captain of Spanish National Junior Teams and Director of the Spanish Tennis Federation Coaching School, Miguel holds a Ph.D. in Sports Psychology, a B.A. in Philology, and a Degree in Law. He is Treasurer of the International Council of Coaching Excellence and Board Member of the European Coaching Council.

“We need to have a clear picture of what our sport looks like in the world and in each nation”

The ITF has utilised the participation data provided by the national and regional associations to provide insight into participation in tennis across the world. Using the data, the ITF has been able to provide a global ranking and data on aspects such as demographics, access to tennis and the delivery of tennis. The national and regional associations can actively use such insight to improve tennis development in their respective countries.
